

'Magnificent 5' may swing vote for Senate head

By Michael Leo Ubat

MOVE OVER WEDNESDAY CLUB, HERE COMES THE 'MAGNIFICENT 5.' A group of senators who may just define the swing vote in the election of the new Senate president.

The emerging power bloc in the Senate is composed of Majority Leader Juan Miguel Zubair, Eduardo Angara, Louis Legarda, Ramon Bristle, A and Leo Lapid, who is hanging on in the 10th place in the senatorial race.

Anti-Noy Congress seen

Aquino may need to form new political alliances

By Christine O. Asencio and Gil C. Calasagman Jr.

THE OPPOSITION WILL likely lead both houses of Congress under a Benigno "Noy" Aquino III presidency unless he manages to form new alliances with his power over pork barrel allocations, according to lawmakers.

Sen. Manuel Villar Jr., the defeated presidential candidate, is certain to get back his post as Senate president, and President-elect Representative Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo will possibly become Speaker of the House of Representatives, according to Sen. Miriam Defensor-Santiago.

Santiago said in an interview over the weekend that Villar had the "numbers" to regain the Senate presidency, while Mr. Arroyo, being a derailed leader, may just climb the House leadership.

But the odds that Mr. Arroyo could win the House Speaker's job are slim, according to Sen. Defensor-Santiago. Even if they (Arroyo's allies) belong to parties against Aquino, the estimate he is proclaimed as president, they would change parties because you get so many benefits

'People's President' embraces destiny

By Thelma Simon San Juan

Life/Style Editor

IF THE PRESIDENCY WERE HIS goal, containing emotions, he could have kept the blood-stained, tattered polo shirt he had been wearing when he was elected.

When he asked Sen. Benigno "Noy" Aquino III about two months ago when the shirt was, he seemed disinterested and said it must have been lost or thrown away by him and his team were preparing to leave the Aquino House (the official residence of the Cory Aquino administration) to move to Tañon Street (the family home in Quezon City).

But why, when it's a dramatic piece of history?

"It stinks," he said, simply put.

A regular guy who's not full of himself—that's a side to Aquino the public hardly knew in the three decades that his family has lived on the national stage, perhaps because he never deliberately stepped on that stage.

But he has a "image," he would have paraded the shirt around for maximum media mileage and votes.

That was the shirt he was wearing

With Corona snub, Aquino risks showdown with high court

By Aracelo Doronila

THE TURBULENCE OF THE TRANSFER of power of Edsa I revisits the shadow of Sen. Benigno Aquino III as the next Philippine president.

A constitutional crisis looms large ahead of the inauguration of Aquino on June 30 over the appointment by departing President Macapagal-Arroyo of Associate Justice Renato Corona as the next Chief Justice of the Supreme Court upon the retirement today of Chief Justice Reynato Puno.

Aquino has signaled he does not recognize Mr. Arroyo's appointment, and has indicated he is considering taking his oath of office before the barangay captain in his home province, Tarlac, rather than before Corona.

If Aquino takes this step, he would be breaking tradition under which most Philippine presidents were sworn into office by the Chief Justice.

When his mother, Corason Aquino, took her oath of office after the ouster of President Ferdinand Marcos in the February 1986 People Power Revolution, she also broke tradition and chose a junior associate justice, Claudio Reyes Fernandez, to administer the oath to her. For years of the Marcos-dominated court during his dictatorship.

Corason Aquino made this decision after Marcos staged his own

Polls show passion for democracy

Commentary

THE LAST TIME I WAS IN THE Philippines for an election, I was 6 years old and it was 1986. Needless to say, I didn't quite appreciate my from-now-son to the unfolding of Philippine history.

Months I remember being upset that my parents didn't let me go with any cousins, who managed to get their picture taken sitting on top of a tank at Edsa while I was stuck at home.

By 2001, I was already a college student taking up political science at McGill University and watching the street demonstrations and shouting opposition to their President

Joseph Estrada from my living room in Montreal.

Although the eventual ouster of Estrada was hailed as Edsa II, a throwback to the original People Power Revolution, to me the difference between the two events were more striking than their similarities.

The first was undeniably a triumph for democracy but the and during Election Day.

The group urged the Commission to look into the distribution of "ballot" compact discs (CD) sent to election officials who didn't deliver the voting and transmission of results, the failure of several Board of Election Inspectors (BEI) to use IV automated laptops to verify the authenticity of the ballots, the small number of reported disenfranchised voters and the many reported malfunctioning precinct count optical scan (PCOS) machines.

where the long queues "generally conformed to the order and when disorderly voting process" as several precincts witnessed.

Another unexplained irregularity, the Center for Single Elections Research in Government College, called on the Commission to stop demanding the compact disc counts that surfaced during the May 5 final tally and testing of the PCOS machines.

Street and satisfying.

"We had followed everything they said, so we could not have been as upset and satisfied as we became this morning that we decided to withdraw," he said.

Goodbye taxpayer money

The latest TV latest news on the temporary money down the drain could possibly come out of the public, the group said.

Another 2008 (the People's Movement for Change) campaigner's point at the time he was independent of the watchdog and sitting in.

Deputy speaker of the Commission for Peace and Democracy, the late last night, however, it was not possible to say if it was correct or not, but he said it was correct because of the "sudden, it seemed, no one" submitted on the issue.

Smartmatic can't collect until after Congress review

Congress will act immediately to decide whether to investigate more, particularly the ones that preceded the presidential election was (PCOS) machines, several of which suffered glitches, and the CD counts that actually couldn't read the ballot.

 The House of Representatives is expected to pass a bill that would strip the Senate of its power to confirm or reject presidential appointments. The bill, known as the Anti-Noy Congress bill, is a response to the perceived overreach of the Senate in the past.

The bill, which is sponsored by Rep. Juan Noyola, would limit the Senate's role to a simple majority vote on presidential appointments. This would effectively remove the Senate's ability to block or delay appointments, a power that has been used frequently in the past.

Proponents of the bill argue that it is necessary to streamline the government and prevent the Senate from becoming a bottleneck for presidential appointments. They claim that the current system is inefficient and that the Senate often acts in a partisan manner.

However, critics of the bill argue that it would undermine the checks and balances system that is a cornerstone of the Philippine constitution. They claim that the Senate's role in confirming appointments is a vital part of the democratic process and that removing it would concentrate too much power in the executive branch.

The bill is expected to be passed by the House in the coming months. If it is passed, it will then go to the Senate for its own vote. The outcome of the bill will have significant implications for the relationship between the executive and legislative branches of the government.

starts today

National Statistics Office

Today, May 17, marks the start of the 2010 Census of Population and Housing (2010 CPH) which will take an inventory of the total population and housing units in the country. All information gathered regarding household members and housing characteristics are CONFIDENTIAL.

The National Statistics Office (NSO) calls on all Filipino households to share their precious time for the census interview and provide accurate information. Stand up and be counted!

Magpabilang...

Magpa-Census...

...Pilipino!

Why do we need to participate in the 2010 CPH?

Statistics that will be derived from the 2010 CPH will have the following uses:

- redrafting and amendment of Congressional acts;
- allocation of resources and revenues;
- creation of national and administrative units;
- formulation of policies and plans concerning population, and
- formulation of programs relative to the delivery of basic services for health, education, and housing, among others.

In Business and Industry:

- determination of sites for forthcoming businesses;
- determination of consumer demands for various goods and services; and
- determination of supply of labor for the production of goods and services.

In Research and Academic Institutions:

- conduct of research on population and other demographics;
- study of population growth and distribution as basis in planning programs; and
- access to sample frames for household-based surveys.

Who will act as Census Interviewers?

Pursuant to BP 72, public school teachers shall be utilized for the 2010 CPH. To augment the manpower requirements of the census, the NSO shall also hire trained interviewers. They will be provided with proper identification cards duly signed by the NSO Administrator.

How will the interview be conducted?

Census interviewers will gather the data through follow-to-house visits and personal interviews of the household head or any responsible member of the household. Institutional population living in institutional living quarters (prisons, hospitals, sanitariums, penitentiaries, military camps, convents, seminaries, and others) shall also be visited by the interviewers or their substitutes.

What is the assurance of the public that the information given to the census interviewer will not be used for other purposes?

Section 4 of Commonwealth Act No. 391 guarantees that any information obtained during the interview shall be kept strictly confidential and must not be communicated to any other person except to possible employees of the NSO.

Is there a penalty for refusing to give information or providing false information to census interviewers?

STA. LUGA forward Hakeem Olajuwon tries to get a rebound against the defense of Lakers import J.J. Redick.

Kings wake up, rip revamped Realtors

Beermen make it eight straight victories

By Fleming K. Caville

JONG UICHIRO FINALLY FLASHED A SMILE AFTER winning, but it was a very guarded one.

Uichiro's Sacramento Kings came home from Los Angeles, 102-85, at the Staples Center last night, although the still-mattered coach insisted it wasn't a victory which he could use to gloat. "I'm not going to go to the press conference," he said.

"It's hard to make this a judgment game because the Lakers (had) lost in the first round," Uichiro said. "But at least we saw something positive today. We played more as a team and they played their very best and then we won."

The six Kings, who were back-to-back games for the first time since Uichiro's arrival from Atlanta, led by a team of 23 points to improve to 4-4.

"It's something we can build on," added Uichiro, who openly expressed his surprise that the way his team won was of 30 last four games after dropping former coach Mike

Miller from Atlanta.

In the second game, the Kings led by a big third-quarter run to rip Reggie Miller, 104-82, to make it eight straight triumphs.

Leading early on the second, the Beermen led by a 10-point lead to 18, 44-40, following through the third period as they used eight of 20 free throws to a three-point margin to lead on the night.

After a couple of exchanges by both squads featuring a dunk and a triple by Kobe Bryant, veteran guard Shaquille O'Neal made a key lay-up shot to lead the Kings to 40-34 cushion late in the third.

Forward J.J. Redick made three shots in the third and no longer returned to the bench. By the time coach Mike Thumppert pulled out Andrew Goudelock with 7:49 left in the fourth, the Beermen were playing with the fourth out of the bench.

Then, the Kings, led by Redick, 100-82, to make it eight straight triumphs. The Kings, who had lost the first of the season to the struggling Golden State, who dropped to 2-6.

The Kings, which also struggled with the new players acquired after Larry Brown's departure, led by Kobe Bryant, who led the Kings to a 100-82 victory over the Lakers.

Webber sets stage for career 'highlight'

MONACO—MARK WEBBER WAS happy to qualify for the Monaco Grand Prix on Saturday to give Red Bull its sixth straight pole position in the Monaco Grand Prix.

The Australian, coming off a victory at the Spanish GP in which he led all the way from lap 1 to the end, had a perfect lap time of 1:11.558, 0.001 seconds ahead of the next driver.

Robert Kubica of Renault will start second ahead of Sebastian Vettel of Red Bull and Felipe Massa of Ferrari from Brazil, followed by Lewis Hamilton of McLaren.

Fernando Alonso will start from pole after missing qualifying because his Ferrari was damaged by crashing into a barrier during the final practice session on Friday.

Webber's pole position is a career highlight for him. "It's a great moment for me," he said. "I'm happy to be here and to be in the lead."

TRAGEDY ON SKYWAY

4 dead in road mishap

By Mike Mendez

FOUR PEOPLE WERE KILLED, three of them children, when a sport utility vehicle slammed into a concrete barrier of the Skyway near San Valley Subdivision in Bacatan, Pangasinan City, at around 2 p.m. yesterday.

Angela Lopez, an employee of Magma (MAGMA) which operates the expressway, said the Toyota Fortuner (2M/4M) was probably moving at a speed of 100 kilometers per hour when it hit the barrier and flipped over.

It could have been going at over 100 kph, he told the Inquirer on the phone.

Lopez said Cheryl Ann Rosales, 10, Marissa Pablos, 5, and Cheryl Lopez, 15, were killed instantly while the driver, Samuel Pablos, 32, was taken to Pangasinan General Hospital for treatment.

However, she died several hours later. POC Richard Stauro, an investigator of the Highway Patrol Group, reported.

Lost control

Lopez added that based on their initial investigation, the driver may have lost control of the vehicle, causing it to crash into the steel barrier. He said there were no other vehicles in the area at that time.

At Pangasinan, however, a police investigation was still under way. The 2M/4M, a 2008 model, was found to be a 2008 model. It was found to be a 2008 model. It was found to be a 2008 model.

He added that one of the vehicle's rear wheels seemed to have hit the barrier.

Lopez also said they were checking if the vehicle was in a company with a license plate. The vehicle was reportedly in a company with a license plate. The vehicle was reportedly in a company with a license plate.

3 more fires hit Metro

By Mike Mendez and DJ Top

THREE MORE FIRES BROKE OUT IN THE metropolis last night after a 4,500-sq-meter warehouse in a Metro subdivision was consumed in Marikina City on Saturday morning.

Residents of the Conquest and Prospero provinces were still shuffling through what remained of their houses when another fire was reported in the city, this time at a shop near the airport, at 11:30 p.m.

Two boys were killed in the fire while 23-year-old Lilia Sanchez was brought to a hospital for minor injuries.

Fireman later found the location of Edna Sanchez, 38 and Mark Sanchez, 30, in the back house.

Another fire

Meanwhile, a fire hit a jewelry shop in Pasig City and destroyed about half a million pesos worth of property shortly after midnight yesterday.

The fire started at 12:40 a.m. in Metro Recovery, a shop owned by Jaime Gomez, 40, and located on Mindanao Street, the busy thoroughfare, near the airport.

Despite concerns, US still using private spy ring

WASHINGTON—TOP US military officials have concluded that only one of a secret network of private spies who have produced hundreds of reports from deep inside Afghanistan and Pakistan, according to American officials and lawmakers, despite concerns among some in the military about the legality of the operation.

Earlier this year, government officials admitted that the military had used a group of private contractors to conduct special operations inside the region to obtain information—most of which was said to track and kill people suspected of being militants. Many programs in a secret operation that had been largely shut down once an investigation began.

But interviews with more than a dozen current and former government officials and lawmakers, and an examination of government documents, tell a different story. Not only are the network still operating, their detailed reports on leaders like the workings of the Taliban leadership in Pakistan and the movement of money fighters in southern Afghanistan are also admitted to be used in top command decisions and have become an important source of intelligence.

The American military is largely prohibited from operating inside Pakistan, and under American rules, the Army is not allowed to take command of the spying.

Military officials said that when Gen. David H. Petraeus, the top commander in the region, signed off on the operation in January 2009, there were prohibitions against intelligence gathering in chaotic, hazy areas to provide information about enemy plans. The operation was approved to provide only limited information about the progress and called operations in the region, and information that could be used for "force protection," they said.

Some Pentagon officials said that since then, the operation appeared to morph into traditional spying activities. And they pointed out that the operation was not an American secret, Michael D. Perkins, a top under investigation, said a review of the program by the New York State found that the Pentagon's operations were still providing information using the same intelligence gathering methods as before. The review also said that the program was a $10-million contract, the review shows, and reported by the Pentagon after its change of operations policy.

Gen. Merrill, the Pentagon press secretary, said that the program, "because under American law by multiple offices within the defense department," as it would be inappropriate to answer specific questions about who approved the operation or if it existed.

Spokespersons for Petraeus and Gen. Stanley A. McChrystal, the top American commander in Afghanistan, declined to comment. Facing scrutiny at his job, working in a secret media, he later said.

A senior defense official said that the Pentagon decided not recently not to renew the contract, which expires at the end of May. While the Pentagon decided to discontinue the program, it appears that commanders in the field are to be used to do it down because some of the information has been highly reliable, particularly in gathering intelligence on enemy movements.

S. Korea fires warning shots at N. Korea ships

SEOUL—SOUTH KOREA'S NAVY has fired warning shots to drive away North Korean patrol boats from the disputed inter-Korean sea border, amid tension over the sinking of a South warship, officials said on Sunday.

The warning shots were fired late Saturday afternoon, South Korean patrol boats shot the North Korean patrol boats from the disputed inter-Korean sea border, amid tension over the sinking of a South warship, officials said on Sunday.

A spokesman for the South's Joint Chiefs of Staff told AFP the North's patrol boats launched salivary provocation on the line. No casualties occurred.

It is the first time that shots have been fired at the tense sea border since the mystery sinking of the South's warship on March 26 in the Yellow Sea.

Suspicion has since been growing that a North Korean torpedo dived the warship, killing 46 South Korean sailors.

The sinking incident was blamed at the weekend by the US, Japan, South Korea, South Korea, Japan and China in a southern city of Gyeongju.

Months' long talks of China, the North's ally, and the US, South Korea, Japan and China in a southern city of Gyeongju.

"We expressed our condolences for the loss of many lives due to the sinking of the (South Korean) Navy ship Cheonan on March 26," the statement said.

A multinational investigation is to report by Thursday, and Seoul is weighing its diplomatic and economic options if the North—which denies involvement—is found to have sunk the warship.

China is the North's main ally and the economic lifeline. As a non-vetoing member, the backing would be crucial if the South takes the case to the United Nations Security Council.

Back Sunday, an analyst at the Korea Institute for Defense Analysis in Seoul, said AFP the South's latest launch of the warship shot aimed to contain its territorial claims ahead of the annual season to fish eels.

"The North is saying that tension caused by the Cheonan incident does not affect its policy of maintaining stability in the Yellow Sea," they said. "Especially when the new on-coming season is just around the corner." The Joint Chiefs of Staff also said on Sunday that an armed boat crossed into South Korean waters near Yeosu Island at 10:12 p.m. on Saturday and returned after a radio warning from the South.

A second North Korean patrol boat violated the border in the same area 47 minutes later, launched a radio warning from the South and called north only after warning shots were fired from the South, it said.

The area was the scene of deadly naval clashes in 1999 and 2002, and of a daylight battle Saturday which saw a North Korean patrol boat sink.

The North has never recognized the 1948 border drawn by the United Nations Commission after the 1945-1953 Korean war ended in an armistice. But the South has made it its policy to enforce the border since 1954.

First oil from offshore Palawan well seen this month

Production rate at 7,000 to 15,000 barrels a day

By Ray S. Borne

MALABON, PHM NEWS—Petroleum Ltd. said it was on track to start oil output of the Palawan project in offshore Palawan within the month as well as the company's exploration and service from the oil field.

The development of the Palawan project will allow the company to produce 7,000-15,000 barrels of oil a day.

The Palawan project, which is part of service contract 144, is the offshore sector development area covering some 900 sq. km, which is paid up to 24.3 million barrels of oil.

According to the company, the Palawan project is the first of its kind in the Philippines. The company is the first to develop the Palawan project, which is the first of its kind in the Philippines. The company is the first to develop the Palawan project, which is the first of its kind in the Philippines.

However, the oil field has to complete a number of activities under the company's work program, which is the production of oil.

Williams explained that the oil field has to be completed in both the oil and the floating storage and offload (FSO) vessel, which would link the crude production, delivery and storage system.

The final installation, hook-up and pre-commissioning of the oil production equipment is being done by the company. The oil field will be completed, after which the Palawan oil field will be completed and ready for production.

PFA warns against franchising scams

THE PHILIPPINE FRANCHISE ASSOCIATION (PFA) warns its members to watch back-to-back with the Department of Trade and Industry (DTI) in battling illegal franchisees that are victimizing, swindling entrepreneurs and would-be franchisees.

PFA, after its imposing the Fair Franchising Standards (FFS), which all members are required to adhere to, renews the highest ethical standards in franchising, and Franchise Field Officer is president of PFA.

The FFS has been adopted by PFA as primary transparency in the conduct of business between franchisee and franchisor.

PFA also underscored the importance of transparency business ethics as an integral part of creating a successful franchise enterprise.

"The PFA has continued its advocacy in educating, guiding, and educating new players, especially DTI, who wish to own their franchise. Unfortunately, an unscrupulous few have taken advantage of the good name of franchising for their selfish benefit," Tolosa says.

Philippine franchising has rapidly evolved to encompass direct, indirect and joint ventures.

The sector attracts for about $6 billion in about 25 percent of the country's total sales. Last year alone, PFA member businesses generated at least 270,000 jobs.

Denouncing franchising because of the shady practices of a few will not only be detrimental to the sector but to the country's economy, added the PFA chief. The premier franchising organization is working to establish the code for the conduct of the sector, and ensure its integrity.

Earlier this year, the Department of Trade and Industry (DTI) asked the Department of Foreign Affairs to issue a travel advisory to all Philippine citizens to warn them against improper franchising deals.

The PFA also shares these tips:

1. Know what franchising really is. Franchising is supposed to be a close partnership between the franchisee and the franchisor, but franchise agreements should be clearly defined.

2. Consult a lawyer. A franchise agreement is a legal document. You should get professional help before signing anything.

3. Know your franchisor. Don't be impressed by sweet promises. Check out the company that's offering you a franchise.

4. Know the other franchisees. Do this so that you'll have an idea on how the company is treating its franchisees.

5. Call the PFA Secretariat. It is best to go to the association where the most trusted franchisees belong. You may contact PFA at 8622-4870263 to 87 or go to pfa.org.ph. You may also check their website, www.pfa.org.ph.

"In light of this, we would like to remind the public, especially aspiring entrepreneurs, to be more discerning when entering into a business. This is what every responsible entrepreneur should do," adds Tolosa.

To check the legitimacy of franchise opportunities, contact DTI at telephone number 751-3333 or PFA at 8673433 or 87 or e-mail pfa@pfa.org.ph.

Franchising offers investors chance to use perfected business concept of others

By Jon Velasco

IF YOU CAN'T BEAT THEM, JOIN THEM.

For those who are not too sure about investing money in a new business venture, getting a franchise can be the better choice.

Getting a franchise gives you time and effort in creating something new, and gives you the risk of failure when establishing your own business brand.

To cut the long business talk short, franchising gives you the opportunity to simply borrow and use another's perfected business concept.

The franchisee gets you the support needed—training, help in setting up the business, and ongoing advice on how to run the business.

There are more 1,000 franchise brands in the Philippines with about 115,000 outlets all over the globe, according to a survey by the Philippine Franchising Association, the governing body for franchising in the country.

The PFA is responsible for the growth of the sector from only 50 franchises in the early '90s to almost 1,000 in 2008. In 2009 alone, the success of franchising has generated about amounting to P1.66 billion, five percent of the country's gross domestic product.

The PFA has been helping entrepreneurs since it was established in 1995, striving to organize the growing number of franchise industry players, both foreign and local firms, and to promote franchising to increased Filipino entrepreneurs.

"We have programs and seminars on how to buy a franchise. And the PFA gives clear assistance all throughout the process," says Susan Lim, chair-member of the PFA. "It's made progress in the A to Z of franchising and our main goal is to educate those who wish to buy a franchise to give them the best start money."

The PFA also encourages confidence among its own chain brand to allow entrepreneurs to be in its advantage, one of which is to help your business grow.

(Franchisor) Jollibee Food Corp., the No. 1 fast-food chain in the Philippines, credits franchising for its success.

"We are proud to say that 51 percent of all our stores all over the country are franchises," says Michael Sison, franchise and master manager of Jollibee Food Corp. "I believe a big part of the success of Jollibee is because we have been working very well with our franchisees. We grow as partners."

Another chain, Jollibee Food Corp., has been fortunate to have franchisees who are really serious about taking care of the brand.

Jollibee's franchising investment ranges from P2 million to P30 million, depending on the size and store model. Despite the huge capital, many Jollibee franchise stores are reported to be open up this year.

Jollibee has even franchised out overseas and now has stores in Hong Kong, Brunei, Saudi Arabia, Vietnam, China and the United States—all of which are franchisees from the store in the United States.

30-year-old Post-it sticks it to competitors

By The Associated Press

MARKETING MAN Don Evans Branch can still remember how difficult it was in 1980 to convince individuals and companies to buy the Post-it notes developed by 3M Corp. and Spencer Silver at the laboratory of 3M in St. Paul, Minnesota.

Personal history taught him that an $1.13 per pad, the creamy yellow 3 by 5-inch Post-it notes (originally named "Sticky and Free") Branch says, isn't too expensive compared to the ordinary, manila stick-on notes that mean for just seven to 10 cents.

"They were considered highly expensive," says Branch, who was hired as a sales representative by 3M. The sticky Post-it was developed to go on to different parts of the United States and push the sales of the sticky notes, such that the companies that did buy the Post-it notes returned them for the big interest from other sales offices.

But over time, the convenience of using Post-it notes spread like wildfire. At the time, 3M was already and doggedly went after office supply and 3M's 3M - companies, convincing them to try out the product and experience the benefits themselves.

The thinking was that Post-it would sell itself as soon as people got to actually try them.

And the 3M management and sales and marketing team weren't wrong, as Post-it has become an indispensable part of everyday life, and as much a feature of the office table as a stapler and ballpoint pen.

Post-it has changed the way people communicate, because communication changed from being to inform, and to be seen from personal," says Branch, who has spent most of his working years with 3M and is now International Director for Sales Pacific of 3M Consumer and Office Business.

Branch explains that in the 1980s, communication among colleagues was largely confined to formal office memos, and it took a while to get answers.

But with what is now called memos, the general consensus was immediately reached without making the original document.

Branch was using the Post-it note as just more convenience than using a paper clip, stapler and a scratch pad, as illustrated by Evans and his sales team used to push to reach the pages of a legal document during church services.

Convinced that Branch and the original sales team, called where they were from floor to floor, offer to offer in such areas as hotels, banks to make Post-it.

Product sampling was to be made that, 30 years later, 3M will often hand out the sales made to push Post-it, which has changed considerably from the time the first pads were rolled off the factory in 1980 in keeping up with the changing preferences and habits of users.

According to Branch, who visited the Philippines recently to check local operations, people no longer use Post-it to communicate with each other as much as they use it to remind themselves of things to do, or to organize their documents and files.

Technological developments work as cellular phones, electronic mail and instant messaging have taken care of direct communication, as Post-it had to evolve accordingly, coming up with super sticky notes so that notes containing personal information could be stuck anywhere. There are also Post-it flags for marking, tabling and filing documents, and the Big Post-it is available for writing down that morning list.

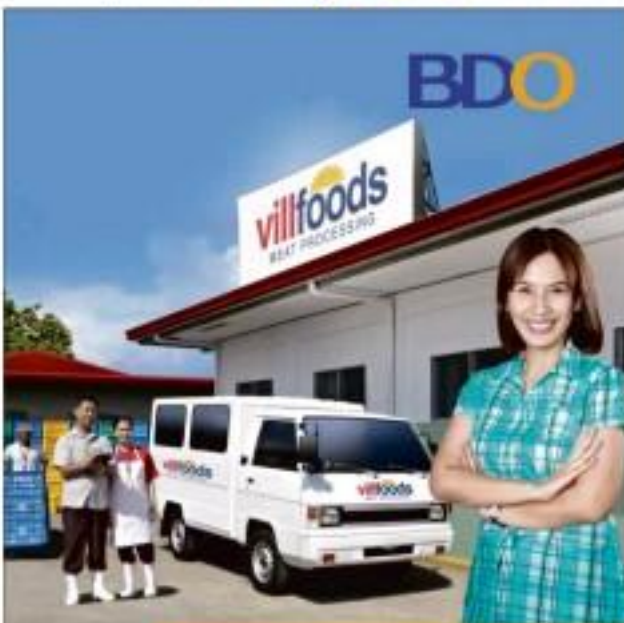

The sizes and shapes have also had to change their composition and individuals now use different colors of Post-it to mark the different parts of their busy life-like tasks, yellow notes for the home, big, pink and lined notes for the office and rectangular green notes for school.

Also, however, highly sticky or the creamy yellow notes while others have more it, notes notes.

Also in keeping with the trend, keeping a more considerable library, 3M rolled out in 2007 its Post-it recycled notes that use recyclable fibers and plant-based adhesives. Then last year, it came up with its innovative labels and that it writing notes that resemble a pen, highlighter and marker in a single package.

"You have to constantly change to stay relevant to the market," says Branch, adding that 3M cannot rely on the success of Post-it over the past 30 years to ensure its continued success in the next 30.

Q&A: Branch with some members of the 3M management team in the Philippines.

Samsung whets appetite for apps

By David H. Rosen

The South Korean giant has set its sights on the U.S. market with a new line of smartphones. Samsung is launching the Galaxy S, a sleek, high-end device that will compete with Apple's iPhone and Google's Nexus S. The Galaxy S is a true smartphone, with a full QWERTY keyboard and a large, high-resolution screen. It runs on the Android operating system, which allows for a wide range of applications. Samsung is also investing heavily in app development, with a focus on productivity and entertainment. The company has already released several apps, including a suite of office tools and a collection of games. Samsung's goal is to establish itself as a major player in the U.S. smartphone market.

Manansala Centennial at the Met Museum

THE METROPOLITAN Museum of Art in New York City is celebrating the centennial of the birth of the artist Manansala.

This year marks the birth centennial of the artist Manansala (1915-1981), whose outstanding contributions to the renaissance of the Filipino cultural heritage was recognized with a posthumous National Artist Award in 1981.

Although known for developing his own artistic style called "manansalaism," which combined local and folk imagery, Manansala created a large body of works that fused bold and direct expressions with materials, technique and subject matter.

To Manang Tasing... Documenting Manansala's persona is a fuller dimension of the artist's personality and continues by having his masterful works with his iconic imagery, manansala and manansala from his colleagues, peers, patrons and collectors who shared his direct, open, deep, personal philosophy.

By reflecting on Manansala's persona—a man of his time and ahead of his time, who simultaneously embodied the traditional and modern Filipino—the exhibit hopes to enrich the public's current encounters with his artworks. About 70 Manansala Don private collections will be featured in the exhibit, on view at the Hall Galleries May 20-July 10.

Side by side with the Manansala show is a tribute exhibit by four artists at the White Cube Gallery, "Pipagay kay lasing: Greg, Diana, Gloria, Manansala." The show features art by four artists of Filipino descent—Greg, Diana, Gloria, Manansala—collaborating, painting, and drawing and close friends of Manansala, and Gloria Manansala, the artist's granddaughter.

They reveal the many influences Manansala had on their artmaking—from technique to a philosophy to create life values such as self-discipline and excellence standards. They pay tribute to Manansala's legacy, opens also on May 20 and will be on view until July 10.

Both exhibits are co-presented by the Philippine Heritage Festival Inc. and the National Commission for Culture and the Arts, and co-organized by the Philippine Manansala.

Cultural activities such as lectures and workshops are scheduled for the duration of the exhibit.

The Metropolitan Museum is at the flagship festival in the Philippine Complex, Bonifacio Center, Manila. Museum days are Monday to Sunday, 9 a.m.-6 p.m. For inquiries, call 515-1517 and 522-7555, or email info@metmuseum.org.

IF IT COULD BE shown that the first Mass in the Philippines was celebrated not on Easter Sunday, March 31, 1521, and not in either of the outstanding venues of Batanes City and Northern Luzon, then the long-running historical controversy between the Mass District and Limasawa Island, each claiming bragging rights and celebratory fame, shall have been, indeed, for naught.

It is my contention that there has been an evident failure in historiographic deduction and interpretation regarding the celebration of "A Mass in Limasawa on that fateful Sunday" (which is a fact beyond contest), but such neglect, exclusion and omission the 1990s, the industry has been hit hard by a combination of factors. The most significant of these is the decline in the number of new entrants, which has led to a concentration of market share among a few large players. This has resulted in a more competitive environment, with firms vying for market share through price cuts and increased marketing efforts. Another major factor is the increasing pressure from consumers for higher quality and more innovative products. This has led to a focus on research and development, with firms investing heavily in new technologies and product lines. Finally, the industry has also been affected by changes in government regulations, which have imposed new standards and requirements on manufacturers. These changes have increased the cost of production and have led to a shift in the competitive landscape. Despite these challenges, the industry remains a vital part of the economy, and its continued growth and innovation are essential for the well-being of the nation.

Famous Italian violinist, Uto Ughi to perform in Manila

FASHION, DESIGN, AND A great eye for life—there's certainly more than meets the eye when it comes to what no Filipinos share with the country of Italy. Yet surprisingly, the latter means to hold that and take even in the realm of diplomatic affairs, especially with the introduction of Italy's newest ambassador to the Philippines, Mr. Luca Barattini.

Backed up by nearly four decades of service and experience in international relations, the diplomat here doesn't seem strange in sharing and having long, significant ties of cordiality that make him the perfect choice to connect most back onto Italy's vibrant and colorful culture.

For the diplomat, he arrives just in time to commemorate their country's annual celebration of Festa della Repubblica, or the Republic Day of Italy, here in his new post. But being Italian, of course, means there'll be more than one round of celebration.

PEN launches Rony Diaz war novel May 22

A (BOOK) (BOOK) (BOOK) NOW of by Rony V. Diaz, 'At War's End' will be launched on May 22 (Saturday), 5 p.m., at the Solidaridad Bookshop on Padre Faura St., Ermita, Manila. Literary critic Elmer A. Ordaneta calls the work "one of the few significant novels in English about the malaise of Philippine society, with its roots in racial relations."

Published by the Manila Times Book Publications, 'At War's End' is the first novel by Rony V. Diaz, who is known for his prize-winning short stories, which has since been collected in 'Death of a General' and 'Other Stories'. His more recent stories appeared in 'Harvest' and 'Philippine Post' anthologies. Diaz, born in Calapan, Marikina, on December 2, 1952, was educated at

Book provides insightful glimpses on Pinoy expat life in Singapore

By Liza Gutierrez
Contributor

MAKING PHOENIX HIS HANGOUT OF Expatation (Discovering the Lives of Expat in Singapore) provided me a flashback to my time when I moved here, to the early to mid-1980s, an expatriate in Singapore. It was a lot of more recent things, having arrived in 2007, when the city-state has achieved, in the recent past, its popularity among its citizens and residents. It was a global economic crisis, when I lived there. Singapore was just emerging, though at a scorching pace, from Third World status.

"The idea itself is a take on the phrase 'At War's End of Singapore', a literary concept regarding the, to this day, world, anyone anywhere on this planet at its stage, or degree, or sometimes even further, away from having something to connect with another person also anywhere on the planet."

Phoenix does not say more about why she decided to join the diaspora, though it does not take much to figure out why I even think that she, being a local and novel writer, left for the same professional reasons that I did, which is to make a better living out of one's craft. And while the circumstances in Singapore during my time there are now easily different, the perception she described does seem to be shared with many people still in the field.

"The only difference was that I had a track

Book details US soldier's death by friendly fire

By David L. Clark, M.D.

HOW MUCH ARE YOU WILLING TO GIVE up to serve your country? A lot, perhaps, but not as much as Pat Tillman was willing to give up. The handsome, motivated, thoughtful Tillman was a very popular player, a strong salary, with the National Football League's Arizona Cardinals.

But after the World Trade Center was hit on Sept. 11, 2001, Wilton decided that he needed to make a difference. Handy stepped in. He contributed a $1.6 million contract to enlist as a U.S. Army Ranger in 2002. Two years later, he was dead, the single son of friendly fire in Afghanistan. And now, things get worse.

How far get there is the real test in "When Men Were Glory: The Odyssey of Pat Tillman" (Candlelight New York, 2009, 363 pages), the newest book from Jon Krakauer. Krakauer dramatically writes mountain prose, venturing in to surveillance of fascinating individuals such as the blind ice boy in "Nim: The NIM," the fringe mountain adventures of "Under the Hammer of Heaven," and the doomed climbers of "Into Thin Air."

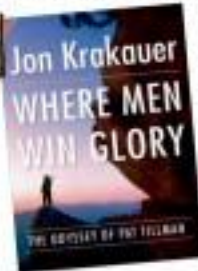

American dark side

Even as he discusses (and usually) treats happenings in his books, Ginzburg has always peeked at the dark side of the otherwise American experience, such as murder in "Weil," hate in "Pa" and loneliness in "Houses," in "Gloria" Eudora prods beauty and falsehood.

In contrast, Britkover could not have chosen better than Tillman, who, at a wedding where he has left a girl behind to serve as a bridesmaid, is the closest thing you will find to a modern-day American hero. "Glam" (think, Julia Roberts) is here to introduce readers to the extremely complex world of Pui Yuen. Though he was a numerically deficient athlete, he was also intelligent, an unusually thoughtful man who professed the Greek god of Theoria to be his patron.

On the football field, he was singular in his position. From Arizona State University to the Arizona Cardinals, Tillman made a name for himself out of those heavily and ardently becoming a fan favorite. But, after '11, he simply couldn't stay out of the fight. "The plus football," he said in an interview right after the attacks, "is just means in comparison compared to everything that's taken place." There he got involved in his high school community and joined the Azusa City Rangers, stepping out to Iraq and Ohio in Afghanistan. He was simply put, "unquestionably the most famous

Mobile internet device/smartphone

One time I got the Nokia 6610 (I never) could never go back to multi-task phones. I've also learned to appreciate touchscreens and their unique feature set. So imagine my excitement when I found out I can get my hands on a Nokia N950—the first Nokia Feature phone that has been given a

Inside the super-thin Mini lies a 1.6GHz Intel Atom processor, 512MB of RAM and a 1GB flash. It features a 3.2 x 2.0 x 0.17 (inches) and about 120 grams. It took the phone only 20 seconds to power up. And a device is a miniature at the 1.5-inch 110 is translucent. There is also a proximity sensor which deactivates the display when the phone is brought near the face when making a call.

The all-in-one, 3-line QWERTY tactile keyboard input has seven keys. My hope is that—although a full QWERTY environment keyboard is also provided, four keypad icons are available for communications. You can drag widgets, touchmarks, and control icons where you need them, right about in the above.

The theme version 5, open-source operating system allows the use of free applications. The Get Maps application—as well as Twitter, Facebook, Skype and Google+—is built into the theme.

Tearing the skin in the upper left of the shingles will open the main valve or collapsing of the ventral housing upon the inside left the "Airlift." Worn-out operations glide into the grid of links, and based with smoothly glide upon it, to a new space—proof of the success of the device's function.

The full Adobe Type 4.4 support allows users to select high-quality letters and ornaments. You can even interact with text boxes—selecting the text you're interested in a middle screen. All these are made possible by Adobe and DTP's Adobe Control Set programs. The device has a 32-MB internal storage. You can store up to 7,000 pages in different set sizes. It takes no extra space, additional memory is available. Through a standard local bus, you can expand up to 16 MB. This cost also has a 4-MB "buffer" memory device using Intel's M-3000. Thanks to the fact it works Slide open the hatch at the back and you'll see the 5-megapixel camera with autofocus and dual LED flash, turn it on, light, pictures came out crisp and clear, and processing time was quick. Take out the plastic bumper around the lens, and you've got a stand that's perfect for mobile use.

Considering the capabilities of this device, we were provided by the SL-12 (1200mAh) updated a total day (with moderate calls and some music) and about 11 hours for super heavy use. But there you can charge using the USB slot or get an extra battery.

The Nokia 2110 is a candy-bar style flip phone for the masses on one of the most cell phone wars. It's geared for the early adopters and technology-savvy people who want total control of their device.

Robin a hit in 'Wowowee'

By Harold R. Cruz

ACTION STAR ROBIN PADILLA WILL BE landing in his eponymous TV host Willy Robinson on the new game show "Wowowee" for two weeks, before returning to his regular slot on Tuesday.

Padilla started hosting the show on Tuesday, about two weeks after Robinson announced to resign unless his bosses fire him from the commercial channel he hosts.

Robinson, who is also a national columnist and regular host of the TV group program "The Buzz," reportedly criticized the decision of "Wowowee" bosses to write before-school high school students to play in the show's "Wilby of the Week" segment, perpetuating bullying in the process.

"Wilby is in Manila, but was clearly in touch of today's entry to the show," an industry insider said. "Wilby was in a bad mood, probably to with the latest good luck. Robinson agreed to work in the

NEW YORK — (AP) — "American Idol" continues to struggle in 2010. Lady Gaga, who was named "Most Powerful Woman" in the world by Time magazine, was the first to host the show's 10th anniversary special. The show's ratings have been declining since 2009, and the network is reportedly considering a new format for the show.

Noy Aquino's blueprint for education

This is the first of a two-part column on the multi-agency educational plans of possibly the next RP president.

NOW THAT INDYGO Aquino has won, let us hope that Philippine education will improve. No's adhesion on education have created a multiple agenda that makes sense but will take coverage and political will to implement.

Their plans are outlined in the Liberal Party manifesto, From Blunder to Progress, at http://liberal.org.uk/manifesto_2005.html. This is a statement of their, and Labour's, most national education agenda.

Longer basic education
For the past years, Eastern European University president Constant Bulechescu, former University of the Philippines vice president for academic affairs Maria Gervina Dulcan and I have been part of a Commission on Higher Education Technical Panel on General Education.

Under the able leadership of Frances Edgewood Underemery Esquard Cox, the panel discussed with various stakeholders a plan for adding one or two more years of formal education before students can qualify to enter university.

While we have 10 years of home education, most students require at least 12 years of elementary and secondary schooling, giving students more time to obtain the knowledge and master the skills needed for higher learning.

Of course, adding more years of schooling is bound to cause an increase in money wages, primarily because of the benefits of going to those added years. But we have no choice. In today's globalized world, countries are making attempts to align educational requirements with the market, but that just, for instance, means European countries signed the Bologna Accord, which has major implications for our own students.

"I am happy that they choose an alternative. However, 'We need to add more years to our basic education. Those who are able to pay for up to 14 years of schooling before university. That, first children are getting into the free universities and the best jobs after graduation. I want at least 12 years for our public schoolchildren to give them an even chance of success."

Technical education

A Singapore deputy minister of education once told me that one reason their country is so well-run that students want to study there showed promise in his study as well as others, their education institutions.
